Garmin is pleased to announce 2017 European Pilot Training Classes. These classes are the same hands-on, scenario based classes for the G500/G600 and GTN Series that are taught at our Olathe, Kansas headquarters, but tailored to the European flight environment and now hosted in European locations.

These classes will address using Garmin avionics in both VFR and IFR flight. The Garmin Aviation Training Department provides scenario-based courses that support the goals of the governmental and industry standards for automation and technically advanced aircraft. All attendees will have access to actual G500/G600 and GTN avionics at their individual learning stations.

Training Objectives: Our goal is for you to be confident in the operation of your Garmin avionics, and integration of this equipment into your flight operations. Garmin’s Pilot Guides, PC trainers, and eLearning courses provide foundational knowledge about your equipment. Our instructor-led classroom training builds on your knowledge and experience using scenario-based training and hands-on interaction with the equipment.

These training opportunities will help you maximize the capabilities of your Garmin equipment and develop your method of integrating these avionics into flight planning and flying. For information and booking please contact:
